This exceptional four-bedroom detached house is set within just under one acre of private grounds, offering a rare blend of privacy, history, and versatile accommodation. The properties most distinctive feature is the Llanfyrnach Motte, a 12th century Norman hill fort, a Scheduled Ancient Monument nestled within the grounds. This remarkable, tree-covered medieval earthwork dates back centuries and serves as a captivating private landmark, providing a unique backdrop that guarantees absolute privacy and a fascinating conversation piece for visitors. The main residence is complemented by a range of useful outbuildings, currently configured as studios and a workshop. These spaces offer excellent potential for conversion into an annexe or for business use (subject to the necessary consents), making the property ideal for those seeking flexible living arrangements or opportunities to work from home.

Externally, the property is approached via a private driveway that provides ample parking for multiple vehicles. There is a separate access point to the left-hand rear of the plot, allowing convenient vehicular access to the workshops and a substantial stone outbuilding. To the front of the property there is an art studio and workshop space. To the rear workshop accommodation comprises three principal rooms: one currently utilised as a ceramics studio, another as a woodworking workshop, and a third providing valuable storage space, with stairs rising to a mezzanine-level office area. A pathway leads from the workshops towards the house, with steps on the right ascending to the historic motte, whose distinctive form remains visible and adds considerable character to the grounds. To the front of the house, a tranquil garden is centred around a charming pond, with gravel pathways meandering through the landscaped grounds. To the side, a generous lawn extends to an attractive seating area, complete with a pizza oven and greenhouse, creating an ideal space for both relaxation and entertaining in this truly unique setting.
